Fairway Technologies' CEO Elected to Board of Directors at CommNexus

San Diego, CA – March 20, 2014 – Fairway Technologies, a San Diego-based technology consulting and software development firm, announced that Brett Humphrey, CEO, has been elected to the Board of Directors of CommNexus and EvoNexus.

“CommNexus is pleased to have Brett Humphrey join the Board of Directors,” said Rory Moore, CEO of CommNexus. “Over the past five years CommNexus has evolved to become one of Southern California’s leading high tech associations through the success of its’ programs such as the Special Interest Groups, MarketLink, and EvoNexus (pro-bono tech incubator). Brett and his team at Fairway will help us create an even more compelling brand through the creation of a new website that will showcase our expanding programs and enable the tech community to be better integrated with those programs.”

“I’m excited to be a part of CommNexus, an organization promoting technology innovation and entrepreneurship in San Diego,” stated Mr. Humphrey. “I look forward to serving on the board to help provide programs and services that promote the local high tech industry. As a technology partner, Fairway is proud to contribute our expertise to support CommNexus and help them achieve their vision for future growth and success.”

Mr. Humphrey founded Fairway Technologies in 2002 with the simple goal of providing reliable, high-quality and friendly software development services to local high-tech businesses. As CEO, he shares responsibility for Fairway’s day-to-day business operations, and is focused on building the corporate infrastructure needed to drive the company’s growth while ensuring that quality and customer satisfaction remain high. Mr. Humphrey has over a decade of IT industry experience, ranging from engineering networks to software development to consulting. He has certifications in several programming frameworks, and has held senior-level positions at some of San Diego’s leading technology companies.
